DECEMBER 2018 NEWSLETTER

Dear Patron,

I would like to suggest a book challenge for the month of December: read a genre you do not typically read. During the past three months, I have been taking a children's and young adult literature course. Each week, we have had to read books from various genres. I was really NOT looking forward to the week I had to read two books from the science fiction category. I have never enjoyed science fiction books and did not expect this time to be any different. I hate depressing made-up worlds that bear little resemblance to the real world! So, I was pleasantly surprised when the two books I chose from my professor's list turned out to be books I actually did enjoy. My first choice was The City of Ember by Jeanne DuPrau, and my second book choice was The Hunger Games by Suzanne Collins. These books were both entertaining and thought-provoking. Who knew what interesting books I was missing by avoiding a genre with which I had had previous negative experiences?! Maybe you also will find interesting and enjoyable reading experiences waiting for you when you venture outside of your comfort zone. We have a library full of possibilities awaiting your brave venture into unknown territory. Stop by soon!
